Family Literacy in Yavapai County

Fiscal Year 2002

Arizona Family Literacy provides comprehensive literacy programs to families who have Yavapai County's lowest incomes (90% have incomes under $25,000), lowest levels of adult literacy, and who have one or more preschool-aged children. Arizona Family Literacy programs integrate literacy instruction into six service components:

- Early Childhood Education
- Adult Basic Education
- Parent Involvement Education
- Parent-child Literacy Activities
- Community Service/Volunteering
- Home-based Instruction

Family Literacy Services must be of sufficient intensity and duration to make sustainable changes in the family including: preparing the child to enter kindergarten ready to learn, and supporting the parents in their role as their child's first and most influential teacher.

During the 2001-2002 program year, 71% of the children made significant language gains while 60% of the five year olds showed "readiness for kindergarten". Because of the intensity of the programming, 76% of Family Literacy parents improved more than two grade levels.

GED Testing in Yavapai County

Fiscal Year 2002

What is the GED and why is it important to our community?

The General Educational Development (GED) Test is a five-part, seven-hour exam in reading, writing, science, social studies, and mathematics. Across the nation, one-third of graduating seniors receiving traditional diplomas cannot pass the GED. Research has shown that compared to students with no diploma, students with a GED experience significant improvement in income level and are more likely to become involved in the educational experience of their children.

More than 15,000 students in Arizona take the GED Test annually. There is no Federal or State allocation to fund the processing of GED diplomas or transcripts. The cost of these vital unfunded mandates is taken from the state's adult education allocation.

344 High School Equivalency Diplomas were issued in Yavapai County
